

ABSTRACT

Systems and methods can be employed to synchronize devices. One embodiment may include a system that includes an input that receives a synchronization signal having a frequency, and an oscillator that provides a clock signal having a frequency. The oscillator adjusts the frequency of the clock signal based on a comparison of an indication of the frequency for the synchronization signal and a corresponding indication of the frequency for the clock signal.

5